World Heritage Web is a web site in the making—one that uses UNESCO's World Heritage List of 900+ sites as a framework for the exploration of the world's cultural and natural treasures.

Visitors will discover context and connections in a rich array of educational and entertaining material about history and religion, art and architecture, science and the environment.

Mission & Goals

World Heritage Web, Inc. is a nonprofit corporation with the goal of creating an educational and entertaining World Wide Web site that presents a clear, engaging and reverent picture of the 800+ cultural and natural properties on UNESCO's World Heritage List—sites that represent many of mankind's great achievements and nature's greatest wonders. This project supports our dual mission of assisting the worldwide cultural and natural heritage conservation movements, as well as providing the world at large a rich cultural reference resource—in time as extraordinary as the sites on the List themselves. We envision a global, “open source” approach to the site's ongoing expansion, and the participation of site visitors in a new web-based heritage conservation community.

Project Scope

The framework for our project is UNESCO's World Heritage List, but its scope goes far beyond any existing heritage web site. At its core are content-rich pages for each site which include authoritative articles, high quality photographs, maps and basic travel information, links to other media, such as video and virtual reality, and a comprehensive bibliography of the best related print and web material. Individual sites are categorized and cross-referenced extensively for their qualities and features. Visitors will explore historical and other thematic relationships with animated, interactive multimedia features. This academically and journalistically sound material will be useful and entertaining for both general and scholarly audiences.

Making It Happen

Preliminary design work is under way, but there is much to be done. A prototype and other materials are available for viewing by arrangement. If you think there might be a role in this project for you or your organization, please contact us!
